Re: Charlie Stillitano

Dear Mr. Mufson:

I write in response to your February 1, 2022 letter regarding Charlie Stillitano.

At the very outset, I reject in its entirety that Mr. Stillitano "has ignored his contractual non-competition commitment." Even if the Employee Covenants Agreement that Relevant now seeks to enforce was enforceable – which it is not – Relevant's prior breaches of its employment agreement with Mr. Stillitano renders the clause null and void and unenforceable.

Relevant's failure to honor the financial commitments it made to Mr. Stillitano including, but not limited to, the salary payable to him, represents a material breach of the Agreement. Simply put, because Relevant's breaches are so clear your threats of "legal action" ring hollow.

I know that over the last few days Dan Sillman has repeatedly reached out to Charlie to discuss what he hoped could be the amicable resolution of these issues. We agree that this would be the most desirable outcome and we welcome such a discussion with the principals (including Steven Ross) as well as us as counsel. Let me know if that is something you are interested in.

In the alternative, if you are foolish enough to commence an action seeking to enforce this covenant, please advise the court that we are counsel for Mr. Stillitano and wish to be heard in connection with any application for temporary injunctive relief.
